Human trafficking is the fastest growing criminal activity in the world today, and is the second largest revenue generator after drugs worldwide. The majority of trafficking victims are women and children forced into the sex trade or illegitimate labor. Children represent more than half of all victims globally.

Human trafficking isn’t just a third world issue – it happens here in Canada, to Canadian women and children.
The Conference:
The Friday portion of the conference will be of interest to front-line professionals, those in the social service industry or students of social justice issues. The keynote speaker will be MP Joy Smith from Winnipeg who has most recently been advocating for mandatory sentencing of a person caught trafficking children. Other speakers will be experts in the fields of labour trafficking, immigration and law enforcement who will be presenting recent cases in Ontario, along with survivor experiences.

Saturday will be of interest to the general public seeking more information about the human impact of modern day slavery both locally and globally and will include presentations from Crime Stoppers, International Justice Mission and local activists.
